About This Document

This ledger presents the complete digital translation of the 2014 Dyfed Archaeological Trust Interim Report on Turnpike and Pre-Turnpike Roads a Scheduling Enhancement Project commissioned by Cadw. The original report, prepared by Duncan Schlee, documented 490 sites across Carmarthenshire, Ceredigion, and Pembrokeshire, recording milestones, mileposts, toll gates, toll houses, and toll bridges that formed the backbone of the turnpike road network across south-west Wales from the late seventeenth century through to the 1840s.

The original dataset was assigned OS National Grid References (NGR) as its primary locational data. While these references are accurate, they are not natively compatible with modern digital mapping tools and smartphones. This project has converted every NGR to decimal degree GPS coordinates (WGS84), enabling every site to be plotted on Google My Maps, Apple Maps, Google Earth, and any GPS-enabled device. One record (PRN 108421) had no NGR recorded in the source data and has been omitted, giving a working total of 489 verified and GPS-corrected entries.

All GPS coordinates presented in this document have been calculated directly and precisely from the OS National Grid References using the OSGB datum transformation. Where the original report contained GPS coordinates, significant errors were identified in most cases in some instances placing sites several hundred metres from their true location. The NGR-derived coordinates used throughout this ledger correct those errors across the entire dataset.

This document is published through People's Collection Wales as an open heritage resource. The map data is accessible via the live Google My Map linked from the PCW collection. All primary research data is the work of the Dyfed Archaeological Trust. The digital translation, GPS correction, and publication are the work of Graham Tudor Emmanuel, Tudor59, People's Collection Wales.

Interactive Map

The full dataset is plotted as a live, interactive Google My Map, accessible via People's Collection Wales. Each pin opens to display the site's PRN, community, county, GPS coordinates, OS National Grid Reference, and the original Dyfed Archaeological Trust site description. The map is divided into separate layers by site type, allowing users to display milestones, mileposts, toll gates, and toll infrastructure independently.

Historical Background

The turnpike road system in Wales emerged from the late seventeenth century as a response to the chronic failure of the parish-based road maintenance system. Turnpike Trusts bodies established by individual Acts of Parliament — were granted authority to charge tolls on specific road sections and use the revenue to fund repair and improvement. By 1843, south-west Wales alone had 23 trusts in operation, responsible for nearly 10,000 miles of road across Carmarthenshire, Cardiganshire, and Pembrokeshire.

The physical infrastructure of the turnpike system left a rich landscape of surviving features. Milestones and mileposts marked the roads at regular intervals, providing distances to the nearest towns and enabling travellers and carriers to calculate toll charges. Toll gates and toll houses—controlled access points, with the keeper resident in the associated cottage collecting the fees. Some gates carried names that survive today as place names on the OS map Gate Farm, Penny Cottage, Gate-fach, Old Gate Cottage.

The burden of tolls on the rural population of south-west Wales tenant farmers already struggling with poor harvests, high rents, and tithe payments became a major social grievance in the 1830s and 1840s. The Rebecca Riots of 1839 to 1843, in which groups of men disguised in women's clothing systematically attacked and demolished tollgates across the region, drew national attention and eventually led to the reform of the turnpike system under the South Wales Turnpike Act of 1844. Several of the toll gates recorded in the Dyfed Archaeological Trust survey sat directly on the routes affected by the riots. The gate at Efailwen on the Whitland Trust lime road — the site of the first Rebecca Riot on 13 May 1839 is the most famous, though it does not appear in the 2014 interim dataset.

The Dyfed Archaeological Trust's 2014 survey recorded surviving evidence of this infrastructure across three counties. Many sites survive only as cropmarks, earthworks, or place names on historic mapping. Others retain physical fabric stone milestones still standing in hedgerows and verges, toll house buildings in residential use. The survey drew on OS Old Series mapping, OS First Edition mapping of the 1880s and 1890s, and published sources including Evans (1985, 1988) and the Historic Environment Records for Carmarthenshire, Ceredigion, and Pembrokeshire.

Summary Statistics

489 sites are recorded across three counties. The table below shows the distribution by site type and county.

Site Type	Carmarthenshire	Ceredigion	Pembrokeshire
Milestone (400)	234	76	74
Milepost (20)	18	0	0
Toll Gate (59)	45	12	0
Toll House (8)	7	0	1
Toll Bridge (1)	1	0	0
Total (489)	305	89	75

Principal Turnpike Routes Identified

The following routes are identified from the site descriptions in the original Dyfed Archaeological Trust report. Sites not clearly attributable to a single named route are recorded separately.

Turnpike Route	Sites Recorded
Llandeilo Turnpike	34
Llandovery Turnpike	32
Carmarthen–Lampeter Turnpike	22
Kidwelly–Llanelli Turnpike	16
Carmarthen–Newcastle Emlyn Turnpike	15
Carmarthen–Llanelli Turnpike	15
Aberaeron Turnpike	13
Aberystwyth Turnpike	10
Llanelli–Llandeilo Turnpike	9
Fishguard Turnpike	9
Carmarthen–St Clears Turnpike	8
Kidwelly–Carmarthen Turnpike	8
Narberth–Tenby Turnpike	7
Narberth–Carmarthen Turnpike	7
Llanelli–Swansea Turnpike	6

Named Sites

The majority of sites in the dataset carries no recorded name. The following 14 sites are the exceptions — gates and toll houses whose names appear on historic mapping or in published sources.

Milestones (400 sites)

Stone markers set at intervals along the turnpike roads recording distances to principal towns. The majority survive only as records on historic OS mapping, though a significant number retain their physical fabric.

Methodology and Digital Standards

Every GPS coordinate in this ledger has been calculated directly from the OS National Grid Reference (NGR) recorded in the 2014 Dyfed Archaeological Trust survey, using the OSGB datum transformation to convert British National Grid coordinates to WGS84 decimal degrees. This is the coordinate system used by Google Maps, Apple Maps, Google Earth, and all modern GPS devices.

Where the original report contained GPS coordinates alongside the NGR references, comparison revealed significant discrepancies in the majority of entries. In some cases, the original GPS figures placed sites 500 metres or more from their true location. The NGR references which form the primary locational record in the original survey have been treated as authoritative throughout, and all GPS figures in this document are derived from them.

What3Words addresses have not been included in this edition of the ledger. The source data contained What3Words entries that were systematically duplicated across multiple sites, indicating errors in the original data entry. Correct What3Words addresses will be added in a subsequent update once batch verification against the corrected GPS coordinates has been completed.

This project operates on a Quality over Speed methodology. Each entry is verified visually against modern satellite imagery to confirm that the plotted pin corresponds to the site description. The live Google My Map linked from this collection reflects the current state of that verification process.
