The Churchyard Grid

The churchyard is divided into 40 plot squares on a grid of 8 rows (A–H) and 5 columns (1–5). This grid was established in the handwritten survey folder held at the church and forms the organisational backbone of all three sections of this ledger.

GPS Coordinates

Every plot square carries a precise GPS coordinate recorded in the field. Entering any coordinate into Google Maps, Apple Maps or a GPS device will navigate to within a few metres of that plot. G5 and H5 are pending a final field visit.

What This Volume Contains

Three routes into the same records — for the church, the researcher, and the visitor

Parish Burial Register

Organised by Churchyard Plot · With GPS Locations and Date Era Notes

The traditional route — organised exactly as the churchyard itself is organised. Browse by plot square, from A1 through to H5. Each plot shows its GPS coordinate, the number of individuals recorded, and a table of names, dates and date era notes.

- 40 plot squares covered, A1 through H5
- GPS coordinate for every plot — navigate direct from a phone

- Date era context from Pre-1538 through to the modern era
- Flags those who died in military service
- References Carmarthenshire Archives for dates not recorded on stone

Integrated Burial Register

Church Record · FindAGrave Cross-Reference · Two Sources Combined

The research route — bringing together the handwritten churchyard survey folder and the FindAGrave digital memorial database for the first time. 856 individual memorial records cross-referenced against the plot grid.

- 856 individual FindAGrave memorial records indexed
- 239 records matched to their plot reference on the ground
- 617 records flagged as awaiting plot assignment — a field checklist
- 475 records with full day, month and year dates identified
- FindAGrave Cemetery ID 2702334 — live database, updated in real time

FindAGrave Individual Ledger

856 Memorials · QR Codes · Direct Links · Alphabetical

The visitor route — alphabetical by surname, one entry per individual. Every person in the St Mary's FindAGrave database with their name, dates, plot reference and a personal QR code linking directly to their memorial.

- 856 individual QR codes — one per person, linking to their memorial
- Alphabetical order with gold letter dividers — browse by surname
- Dates in green carry full day, month and year information
- Plot references connect directly to the churchyard grid plan
- Works in real time — any changes to FindAGrave appear immediately on scan

From a Scanned Ledger to a Living Record

How St Mary's Church, Kidwelly got a burial register for the twenty-first century

I am not an academic. I have no institutional backing, no university affiliation, no research budget. I am a retired independent researcher based in Kidwelly, and I work alone usually at odd hours, often with a dog at my feet and a cup of tea going cold beside me. What I do have is a methodology that has been growing, project by project, since my wife Linda died in 2015 and her last words to me were to go and travel.

The work that produced this volume began the way most of my projects begin with a visit, a camera, and a hunch that something could be done with what was sitting in a vestry gathering dust. A few years ago, I photographed the handwritten burial survey folder at St Mary's Church, Kidwelly. Filed the scans away and carried on.

This week, after working with AI research tools for several years now and seeing things in a different way, those scans became something I did not expect found ways for delving more into the history written in that folder over many years. I will let the work speak for itself.

St Mary's Church has a handwritten survey folder that lists the families buried in each plot of the churchyard, with grid references, dates, addresses, occupations, and notes accumulated over the years. It is a remarkable piece of local record-keeping patient, detailed, and almost entirely unknown outside the parish. Nobody had ever connected it formally to anything else.

What Was Done

The handwritten survey folder was transcribed in full every surname, every name within each plot, every grid reference from A1 to H5, every scribbled note about an address or an occupation or a date that was only half legible. That became the backbone of Section One.

The FindAGrave memorial database for St Mary's Churchyard Cemetery ID 2702334 was extracted and parsed. 856 individual memorial records, each with a unique ID, dates where known, and a direct URL. Those records were sorted alphabetically, cross-referenced against the plot grid wherever a reference existed, and the gaps noted. That became the material for Sections Two and Three.

GPS coordinates were recorded in the field for every plot square in the grid 38 of the 40, with G5 and H5 still to be completed on a future visit. Each coordinate marks the approximate centre of a plot square, connecting the paper record to a precise point on the ground that anyone with a smartphone can navigate to.

856 individual QR codes were generated one per person each linking directly to that individual's memorial page on FindAGrave. Those codes were embedded into the printed ledger alongside each entry. For the first time, a printed church register contains a live digital link to every person buried in the ground outside.

What This Represents

I want to be careful not to overstate this. What I have produced is a working document, not a finished archive. Some of the names in the handwritten survey folder are illegible. Some of the dates are guesses. Some of the FindAGrave entries have no dates at all, because the stone has worn smooth, and nobody has yet been able to read it. This ledger records what is known and is honest about what is not.

But within those limits, what has been achieved here is something I believe is genuinely new for a Welsh parish church. The physical stone in the churchyard. The handwritten survey folder on the vestry shelf. The GPS coordinate that locates the plot to within a few metres. The printed register that sits in the church. The live digital memorial on FindAGrave. All five connected, for every person buried at St Mary's whose name is recorded.

I have called this the Fifth Generation Memorial methodology the physical stone, the archive, the GPS, the QR code, the AI-assisted synthesis. Each generation builds on the one before. None of them replaces the others. The stone still matters. The handwritten folder still matters. But now they are not isolated from each other.

Previous work of mine the Pembrey and Burry Port War Memorial project, the Llandyry Church Cemetery project demonstrated that an independent researcher working without institutional support could produce material that merited formal recognition by the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Wales, and that was accessioned into the Coflein national monuments database. St Mary's Kidwelly is the fullest expression of that methodology to date.

What It Means in Practice

A vicar who wants to look up who is buried in plot D4 can turn to Section One, find the plot, read the names, and know immediately whether the dates are reliable or whether there are gaps that need filling from the archives in Carmarthen. That has never been possible before from a single printed document.

A family researcher who comes to Kidwelly looking for their ancestors can open Section Three, find the surname they are looking for, and scan the QR code beside it. Within seconds they are on their great-grandmother's memorial page, with her full dates if they are recorded, photographs if anyone has uploaded them, and family connections built up by researchers all over the world. That journey from surname to memorial to full biography used to take hours. Now it takes thirty seconds in a church pew.

A heritage professional submitting to Coflein can take the GPS coordinates from the grid table, the memorial counts by plot, and the cross-referenced FindAGrave data, and has the foundation of a spatial and biographical record of the site more detailed than anything previously submitted for this churchyard.

What Comes Next

There are hundreds of Welsh parish churches with handwritten survey folders sitting in vestries. Most have not been connected to the GPS coordinates that would allow anyone to navigate to a specific grave, or to the digital memorial databases that would allow a visitor with a phone to find a biography in seconds.

The methodology demonstrated here is fully replicable. It requires a visit, a camera, and a willingness to spend a day working through what you find. The tools exist. The databases exist. What has been missing is a way of connecting them that produces something a church can use not a spreadsheet, not a database query, but a printed register with GPS coordinates and QR codes that works for a vicar, a researcher, and a visitor standing in the rain outside.

This volume is offered to St Mary's Church, to the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Wales, to People's Collection Wales, and to anyone else who might find it useful freely, without condition, in the same spirit as everything else I have produced from this small house in Kidwelly since Linda told me to go and travel.

It is worth saying clearly that none of the tools used to produce this work cost anything. FindAGrave is free. People's Collection Wales is free. Google My Maps is free. The AI research tools that helped transcribe, parse, cross-reference, and format 856 memorial records in a single day are accessible to anyone with a computer and an internet connection. The barrier has never been the technology. It has been knowing what to do with it.

That matters beyond Kidwelly. Every scanned parish register, every photographed vestry ledger, every faded burial record sitting in a chapel vestry or a family archive in Wales is a potential project. The methodology works wherever there is a record, a grid, and someone willing to connect them. Welsh Nonconformist chapels alone hundreds of them closed, their records scattered represent an archive of community and family history that has barely been touched. The same approach that produced this volume for St Mary's could be applied to any of them, at no cost, by any researcher willing to make a start.

APPENDIX

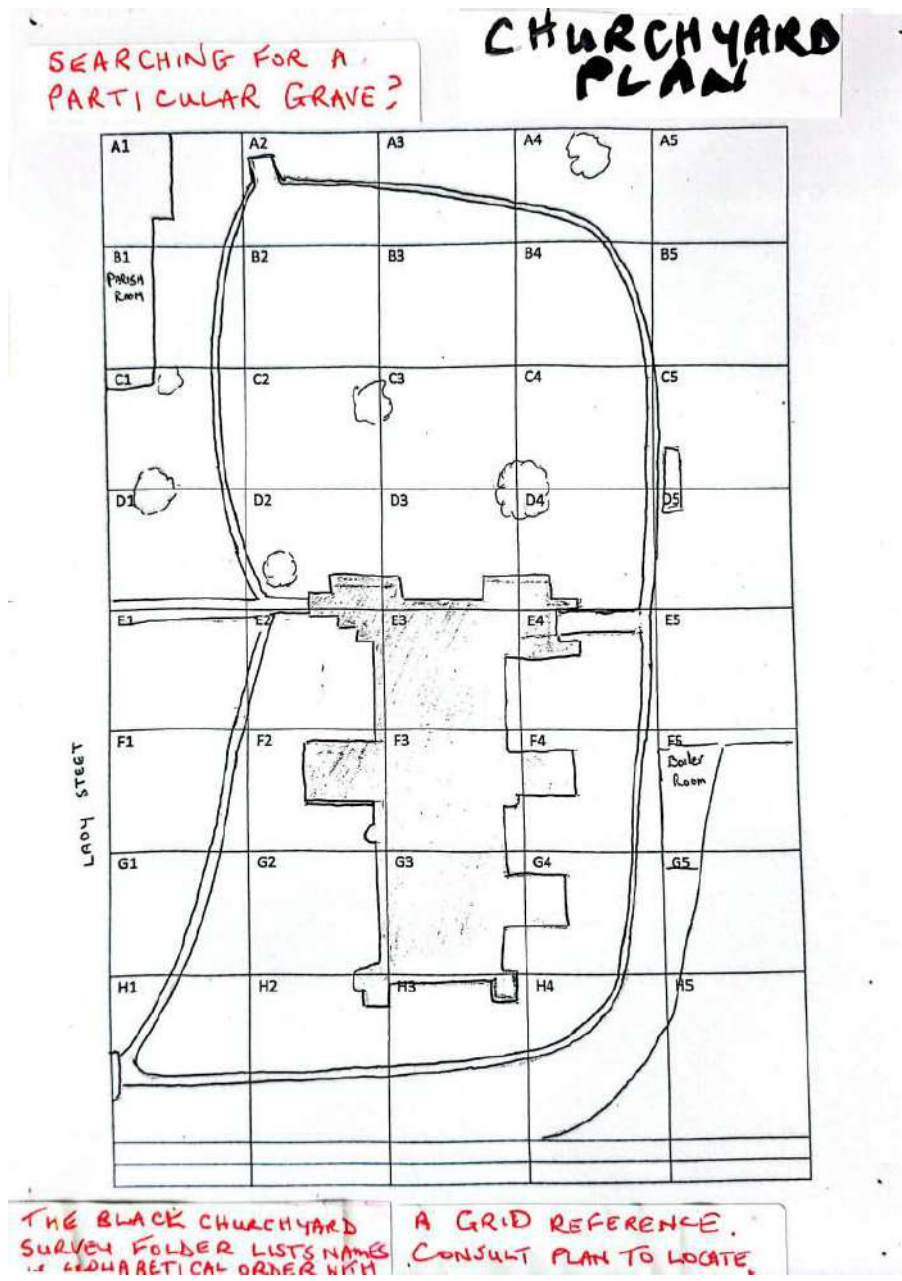

The Original Source

The twenty pages that follow are the scanned images of the original documented churchyard survey folder photographed at St Mary's Church, Kidwelly. This is the primary source from which the entire ledger was produced.

Page 1 shows the hand-drawn churchyard plan with the A1–H5 grid. Page 2 reproduces the parish register history table included with the folder. Pages 3–20 are the alphabetical burial survey itself every surname, every name, every date and note as written in the original document.

Where dates are marked with asterisks, question marks or partial figures in the original, those markings have been preserved in the transcription. Where names were illegible, they are noted as such. The scans reproduced here are the unaltered photographic record of the folder as it exists at the church.

Key dates for Parish registers

Pre 1538	There was no recognised system of record keeping for christenings, marriages and burials. Some parish priests made notes of christenings and deaths in the more notable local families in journals or the margins of service books but for the majority there was no official recording.
1538	Thomas Cromwell, Lord Privy Seal and Vicegerent, issued legislation on 5 September 1538 that ordered every parson, vicar or curate to keep a register of every wedding, christening and burial in his parish. Generally, entries were made on paper, often loose sheets.
1598	Elizabeth I confirmed a constitution issued the year before directing that the registers should be kept more carefully, parishes were ordered to buy parchment registers to replace the paper copies. The entries were to be copied into the new registers, especially from the first year of Elizabeth's reign (1558), unfortunately, many of the parishes took this literally and only copied from 1558, discarding the earlier information. They can often be confusing as several years may be mixed together, with gaps filled in by random entries.
1731	The language used in the registers varies from parish to parish between English and Latin up to 1732. An Act of Parliament was passed in 1731 decreeing that English was to be the language of the courts from 25 March 1733. Whilst the Act was not directed at parish registers, nevertheless its legislation was generally adopted as there are very few Latin entries after 1732.
1754	Commonly known as Lord Hardwicke's Act, this Act was passed to try to prevent clandestine marriages. Marriages, to be legal, from 25 March 1754 had to be either by licence or after the calling of banns, entries were recorded in separate pre-printed registers. Nonconformists, excepting Jews and Quakers, had to now marry in the parish church.
1813	The introduction of Rose's Act required the recording of baptisms, burials and marriages in three separate registers, each pre-printed to a prescribed form, with numbered pages and each entry numbered consecutively.
1837	Civil registration introduced, this had no effect on the registering of baptisms and burials but a new form of register for marriages was introduced to record the same details as the civil marriage registers. Marriages could now be performed in any premises licensed for the purpose, releasing nonconformists from having to marry in the parish church.
1971	Bi-lingual English/Welsh marriage registers introduced.

	Here lies a good Christian whom all must applaud, since he suffered much hardship at home

And Abroad. But the hardest engagement he was ever in was the battle of self in the conquest of sin

The Churchyard Grid

The churchyard is divided into 40 plot squares on a grid of 8 rows (A–H) and 5 columns (1–5). This grid was established in the handwritten survey folder held at the church and forms the organisational backbone of all three sections of this ledger.

GPS Coordinates

Every plot square carries a precise GPS coordinate recorded in the field. Entering any coordinate into Google Maps, Apple Maps or a GPS device will navigate to within a few metres of that plot. G5 and H5 are pending a final field visit.

From a Scanned Ledger to a Living Record

How St Mary's Church, Kidwelly got a burial register for the twenty-first century

I am not an academic. I have no institutional backing, no university affiliation, no research budget. I am a retired independent researcher based in Kidwelly, and I work alone usually at odd hours, often with a dog at my feet and a cup of tea going cold beside me. What I do have is a methodology that has been growing, project by project, since my wife Linda died in 2015 and her last words to me were to go and travel.

The work that produced this volume began the way most of my projects begin with a visit, a camera, and a hunch that something could be done with what was sitting in a vestry gathering dust.

St Mary's Church in Kidwelly has a handwritten survey folder. It lives at the church. It lists the families buried in each plot of the churchyard, with grid references, dates, addresses, occupations, and notes that have accumulated over the years. It is a remarkable piece of local record-keeping patient, detailed, and almost entirely unknown outside the parish. Nobody had ever connected it formally to anything else.

I scanned the pages and brought them home. What came next was trial and error deciphering the entries, transcribing them cleanly, understanding the grid system, matching names to the FindAGrave memorial database that volunteers had been building for St Mary's over many years. It took most of a day. The result is the volume you are holding.

What Was Done

The handwritten survey folder was photographed and transcribed in full every surname, every name within each plot, every grid reference from A1 to H5, every scribbled note about an address or an occupation or a date that was only half legible. That became the backbone of Section One.

The FindAGrave memorial database for St Mary's Churchyard Cemetery ID 2702334 was extracted and parsed. 856 individual memorial records, each with a unique ID, dates where known, and a direct URL. Those records were sorted alphabetically, cross-referenced against the plot grid wherever a reference existed, and the gaps noted. That became the material for Sections Two and Three.

GPS coordinates were recorded in the field for every plot square in the grid 38 of the 40, with G5 and H5 still to be completed on a future visit. Each coordinate marks the approximate centre of a plot square, connecting the paper record to a precise point on the ground that anyone with a smartphone can navigate to.

856 individual QR codes were generated one per person each linking directly to that individual's memorial page on FindAGrave. Those codes were embedded into the printed ledger alongside each entry. For the first time, a printed church register contains a live digital link to every person buried in the ground outside.

What This Represents

I want to be careful not to overstate this. What I have produced is a working document, not a finished archive. Some of the names in the handwritten survey folder are illegible. Some of the dates are guesses. Some of the FindAGrave entries have no dates at all, because the stone has worn smooth and nobody has yet been able to read it. This ledger records what is known and is honest about what is not.

But within those limits, what has been achieved here is something I believe is genuinely new for a Welsh parish church. The physical stone in the churchyard. The handwritten survey folder on the vestry shelf. The GPS coordinate that locates the plot to within a few metres. The printed register that sits in the church. The live digital memorial on FindAGrave. All five connected, for every person buried at St Mary's whose name is recorded.

I have called this the Fifth-Generation Memorial methodology the physical stone, the archive, the GPS, the QR code, the AI-assisted synthesis. Each generation builds on the one before. None of them replaces the others. The stone still matters. The handwritten folder still matters. But now they are not isolated from each other.

Previous work of mine the Pembrey and Burry Port War Memorial project, the Llandyry Church Cemetery project demonstrated that an independent researcher working without institutional support could produce material that merited formal recognition by the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Wales, and that was accessioned into the Coflein national monuments database. St Mary's Kidwelly is the fullest expression of that methodology to date.

What It Means in Practice

A vicar who wants to look up who is buried in plot D4 can turn to Section One, find the plot, read the names, and know immediately whether the dates are reliable or whether there are gaps that need filling from the archives in Carmarthen. That has never been possible before from a single printed document.

A family researcher who comes to Kidwelly looking for their ancestors can open Section Three, find the surname they are looking for, and scan the QR code beside it. Within seconds they are on their great-grandmother's memorial page, with her full dates if they are recorded, photographs if anyone has uploaded them, and family connections built up by researchers all over the world. That journey from surname to memorial to full biography used to take hours. Now it takes thirty seconds in a church pew.

A heritage professional submitting to Coflein can take the GPS coordinates from the grid table, the memorial counts by plot, and the cross-referenced FindAGrave data, and has the foundation of a spatial and biographical record of the site that is more detailed than anything previously submitted for this churchyard. The plot-level coordinates alone 38 precise locations within a single burial ground are a contribution to the spatial record of Welsh heritage that did not exist before this week.

What Comes Next

There are hundreds of Welsh parish churches with handwritten survey folders sitting in vestries. Some have churchyard plans. Some have been partly digitised by volunteers. Most have not been connected to the GPS coordinates that would allow anyone to navigate to a specific grave, or to the digital memorial databases that would allow a visitor with a phone to find a biography in seconds.

The methodology demonstrated here is fully replicable. It requires a visit, a camera, and a willingness to spend a day working through what you find. The tools exist. The databases exist. What has been missing is a way of connecting them that produces something a church can use not a spreadsheet, not a database query, but a printed register with GPS coordinates and QR codes that works for a vicar, a researcher, and a visitor standing in the rain outside.

This volume is an attempt to show what that looks like. It is offered to St Mary's Church, to the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Wales, to People's Collection Wales, and to anyone else who might find it useful freely, without condition, in the same spirit as everything else I have produced from this small house in Kidwelly since Linda told me to go and travel.

About this register

This register presents the burial records of St Mary's Churchyard, Kidwelly, organised by plot square the same grid used in the handwritten survey folder held at the church. Each plot section shows the individual names recorded, their dates where known, and a note explaining what the record era means for the completeness and reliability of the information.

Dates are coloured to indicate record quality. Green indicates a full and reliable date. Grey indicates the date was not recorded or was illegible on the memorial stone. Amber or red indicates an early record where details may be incomplete see the date era notes for context.

GPS coordinates are provided for each plot square to allow precise location in the churchyard. These connect the printed record to the churchyard plan and to digital mapping tools.

A Note on Parish Record-Keeping

DATE	WHAT IT MEANS FOR BURIAL RECORDS
Pre-1538	No legal requirement to keep records. Notes made at the discretion of individual priests. Expect gaps and treat any dates with caution.
1538	Thomas Cromwell ordered every parish to keep a register of weddings, christenings, and burials. Records begin but were on paper and often loose sheets — many have been lost.
1598	Elizabeth I, required parchment registers. Earlier records were to be copied across, but many parishes only copied from 1558, losing earlier entries.
1731	English became the required language of official records. Before this date some entries may be in Latin.
1813	Rose's Act introduced standardised pre-printed registers with numbered entries. Records from this date are generally complete and reliable.
1837	Civil registration introduced. Church burial records continue alongside civil records. From this point both sources can be cross-referenced.
1971	Bilingual English/Welsh registers introduced.

ST MARY'S CHURCH, KIDWELLY

Integrated Burial Register

Church Record · FindAGrave Cross-Reference

This document brings together two independent sources into a single working record for St Mary's Churchyard, Kidwelly:

The handwritten churchyard survey folder held at St Mary's Church — transcribed from the scanned pages — recording family plot occupants with grid references, addresses, occupations, and dates spanning approximately 1750 to 2013.

The current FindAGrave memorial database for St Mary's Churchyard, Kidwelly (Cemetery ID 2702334), printed 14 April 2026, containing individual memorial records with unique IDs and direct hyperlinks.

Total FindAGrave memorial records extracted: 856

Records with churchyard grid plot reference: 239

Records awaiting plot assignment: 617

Records with full day/month/year dates: 475

Records with unknown or partial dates: 403

What This Represents

The church register and FindAGrave together form a fifth-generation memorial record — the physical stone, the handwritten survey, the digital memorial, the grid reference, and now the integrated document connecting all three. Where FindAGrave holds a memorial with no plot reference, that gap is flagged for field verification. Where the church register records a name with no FindAGrave entry, the memorial is yet to be submitted. Working through both together will complete the picture.

HOW TO USE THIS DOCUMENT

The Three Working Sections

Part One contains the complete FindAGrave memorial index — all 856 individual records extracted from the St Mary's Churchyard database, sorted alphabetically by surname. Each row shows the name as recorded, the churchyard plot reference where assigned, the dates, and a live hyperlink to the individual FindAGrave memorial. In the digital version of this document, clicking any URL will open the memorial directly.

Part Two isolates the 617 records that currently carry no plot reference on FindAGrave. These are the priority for your next field visit — each one needs to be located on the ground using the churchyard plan, and the plot reference added to the FindAGrave memorial.

Part Three lists the 475 records that hold full day/month/year dates, making them the most genealogically complete entries. These are the records most likely to attract family researchers and the strongest candidates for additional biographical work.

Cross-referencing with the Church Register

The transcribed church register (produced in the companion document) uses a family plot format — multiple individuals sharing one grave plot appear together in a single entry. FindAGrave works the opposite way, with one record per individual. The grid reference (A1–H5) is the bridge between the two: find the plot in the church register to understand the family group, then check each member has an individual FindAGrave memorial. Where a name appears in the register but not in FindAGrave, submit a new memorial. Where a FindAGrave record has no plot, locate the grave and add the reference.

Plot References

The churchyard is divided into a grid of columns A–H and rows 1–5, as shown on the plan displayed at the church entrance. Of the 856 FindAGrave records, 239 carry a plot reference. The remaining 617 have been submitted to FindAGrave without one, or the plot field was not completed at time of entry. Both the church register and a site visit are needed to fill these gaps.

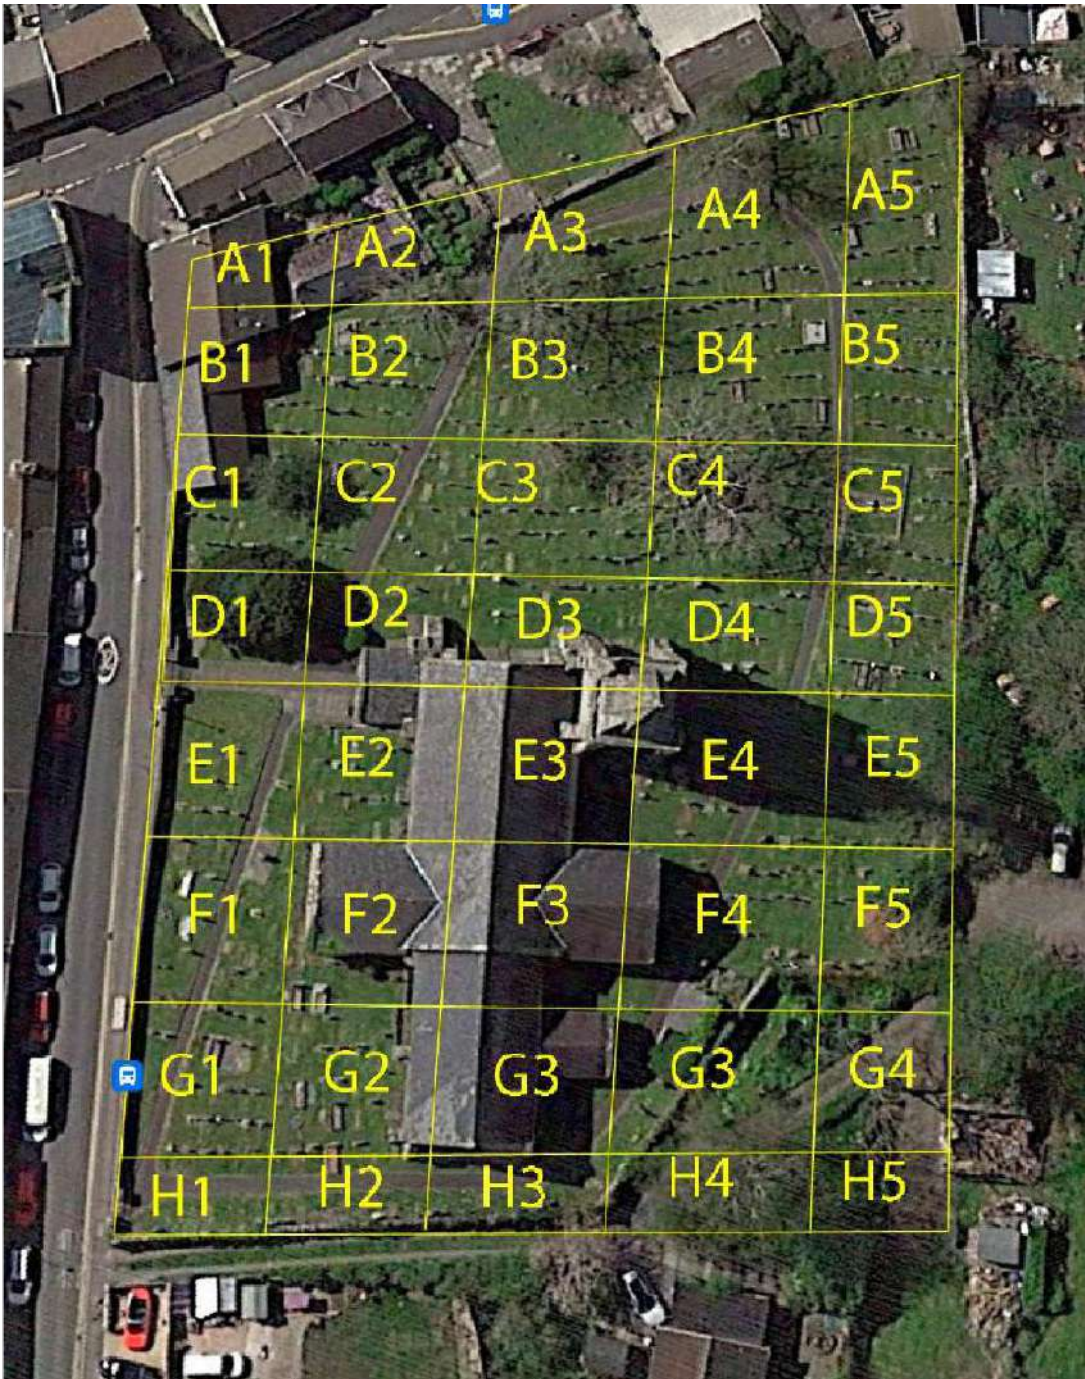

Date Conventions

Dates shown in green in Part Three carry full day, month and year information. Dates showing year only are drawn from the church register transcription. Entries showing 'unknown' indicate the grave inscription was not legible at time of survey, or dates were not recorded. These are the candidates for stone-by-stone re-examination during a future site visit.

Those Who Fell in Service

A number of entries in the FindAGrave database relate to individuals who died in military service, were killed in action, or were lost at sea. These are identified in the companion church register document and should be cross-referenced with the Commonwealth War Graves Commission (CWGC) database at cwgc.org, and with the Kidwelly and Pembrey & Burry Port war memorial records.

PART TWO — RECORDS AWAITING PLOT ASSIGNMENT

617 FindAGrave Memorials Without a Grid Reference

These memorials are live on FindAGrave but carry no churchyard plot reference. Each one needs to be located during a site visit using the churchyard plan, and the plot reference (e.g. D4, G2) added to the FindAGrave memorial record. Use the companion church register document to cross-check against the handwritten survey folder entries — the surname and dates should allow most to be matched to a plot without difficulty.

PART THREE — RECORDS WITH FULL DATES

475 Memorials with Day, Month and Year

These are the most genealogically complete entries in the St Mary's FindAGrave database — each carries a full day, month and year of birth or death as recorded on the memorial stone. They represent the strongest starting points for family history research and biographical development. Where a plot reference is shown, the entry can be directly located on the ground using the churchyard plan.

How to use this ledger

Browse alphabetically by surname. Each entry carries the name as recorded on FindAGrave, birth and death dates where known, the churchyard plot reference on the A1–H5 grid, the individual memorial ID, a direct URL, and a personal QR code. Scan the QR code on any entry to open that person's memorial page directly on FindAGrave — full dates, photographs, and family connections added by researchers worldwide.

*Dates shown in green carry full day, month and year information.
Dates shown in grey are unknown or unrecorded on the memorial stone.
Plot references marked 'unassigned' need field verification against the churchyard plan.*
