www.casgliadywerincymru.co.uk

www.peoplescollectionwales.co.uk

Learning Activity Key Stage 3

This resource provides learning activities for your students using People's Collection Wales. It is one of a series of nine relating to Patagonia for KS3.

Establishment of the Welsh Settlement in Patagonia

The Voyage of the Mimosa, 1865

The Native Patagonians and the Welsh Settlers

Early days in Patagonia

'Crossing the Patagonian plains': from the Camwy Valley to Cwm Hyfryd

Dark times – Floods and Emigration

Early Schools in the Welsh Settlement - Patagonia

History of the Welsh Language in Patagonia

Chapels and Churches in Patagonia

The voyage of the 'Mimosa', 1865

By Culturenet Cymru

Introduction

' ... May 28 [1865], the anchor was raised and we bade farewell to the land of our birth.' Thomas Jones, Glan Camwy

Tasks and learning objectives

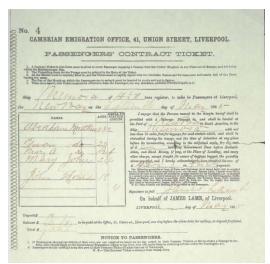

- 1. First emigrants' places of origin
- 2. Reasons for emigrating
- 3. The voyage and it's difficulties
- 4. Write a script The Migration
- 5. Landing on the beaches
- 6. Skills to establish a settlement
- 7. Richard Ellis's Journal
- 8. The first months in Patagonia

Download the Collection of images and worksheets for this activity from People's Collection Wales

The voyage of the 'Mimosa', 1865

' ... May 28 [1865], the anchor was raised and we bade farewell to the land of our birth.' Thomas Jones, Glan Camwy

On 28 May 1865, the first group of Welsh emigrants began its long journey from Liverpool to Patagonia. Although many of the 150 passengers aboard the 'Mimosa' would probably have been anxious about the voyage ahead, they would also have been relieved that the waiting was over and that they were starting on their journey to South America.

Ticket of the Rev. Abraham Matthews, a passenger on the 'Mimosa', 15 May 1865

Many of the passengers had spent over four weeks in Liverpool. The original intention had been for the 'Halton Castle' to set sail on 25 April 1865. However, at the last minute, the organisers were informed that the 'Halton Castle' had not returned from its previous voyage, and that it would not be ready to depart for Patagonia on the arranged date. Upon hearing this news, many of the passengers withdrew from the venture. Several families who waited for alternative arrangements to be made could not afford to stay in Liverpool, and they borrowed money from Michael D. Jones and his wife Anne in order to pay for food and lodging. In the meantime, the Emigration Committee hired the 'Mimosa', a small tea-clipper, to make the journey to Patagonia.

On 24 May 1865, the passengers were granted permission to board the ship. Many of them hailed from the industrial areas of Mountain Ash and Aberdare, and only a minority came from agricultural communities. As well as a number of coal miners and quarrymen, the first contingent included a schoolmaster, preachers, a builder and a doctor. Before leaving, a Council ('Cyngor y Wladychfa') was elected to govern the Settlement. The Council consisted of twelve members, and a president, secretary, treasurer and auditor were also elected. On 25 May, the captain of the 'Mimosa', a 25-year-old man named George Pepperrell, announced that the anchor was about to be lifted. Hundreds of people, including Michael D. Jones and his wife Anne, gathered on the dock to bid farewell to the passengers.

The Welsh banner was raised, and the passengers sung an anthem composed especially for the occasion, to the tune of 'God Save the Queen'. However, after leaving the docks, the 'Mimosa' remained on the River Mersey for three days until the wind was favourable. Finally, at four o'clock in the afternoon on 28 May, the anchor was raised and the 'Mimosa' began its voyage to Patagonia.

Receipt from Evans & Robinson, Liverpool, to the Rev. Michael D. Jones, 14 December 1865

The passengers had an eventful start to their voyage - strong winds and huge waves came crashing down on the ship soon after it left the River Mersey. The weather remained relatively calm while they crossed the Atlantic Ocean and until they reached the shores of Brazil, where the ship was caught in another storm. In addition to the bad weather, the passengers had to cope with the humdrum of life at sea, as well as the poor standard of food and accommodation. Trouble brewed on one occasion after the captain ordered that the females should all have their hair washed and shaved. Little is known of the conditions aboard the ship, but several passengers were struck ill and four children died before reaching Patagonia.

Catherine Davies and her children, who emigrated to Patagonia on the 'Mimosa', c. 1865

Occasionally, there would also be a cause for celebration on the 'Mimosa'.

On 11 June, Mary Jones, the wife of John Jones of Mountain Ash, gave birth to a son named John. On 15 June, a few days after the death of their 2-year-old son James, Aaron and Rachel Jenkins had a baby daughter named Rachel. Also on the voyage, William and Anne Lewis of Abergynolwyn were married in a ceremony officiated by the Rev. Lewis Humphreys.

Some entertainment and games were also to be had aboard the 'Mimosa'. The passengers would often share stories and sing.

As the ship crossed the equator on 28 June, many of them watched members of the crew as they celebrated this important milestone. John Seth Jones wrote an account of this event in his diary: 'Two sailors wore long fake beards, made from bits of rope; fireworks were thrown in the air; the sailors threw buckets of water over each other, &c. This practice took place tonight. Water was poured over almost all the emigrants, apart from the women and children. I had some three bucketfuls over my head as well as some water splashed here and there. I went down before they finished, this all took place before nine. I waited until dawn before going to bed, and I then stayed in bed throughout the morning. After they had thrown water, they sent rockets up in the air, and many were sent up. Then many of the more respectable members went to have drinks with the captain in the cabin, and it is said that many of them were rather drunk, but none of those whose names appear in this book.' [Translated from Welsh]

On 26 July, after almost two months at sea, a member of the crew announced that land was in sight. The ship arrived at New Bay that night and the passengers climbed to the deck to catch their first glimpse of land in the morning. The following day, another ship called 'Juno' was seen nearby, and the captain and Watkin P. Williams took a small boat to meet it. They returned to the 'Mimosa' before long, accompanied by Lewis Jones. He was immediately called upon to address the passengers, and there was much celebration. He later returned to his ship, and the 'Mimosa' sailed on before dropping anchor in the bay. A small crew of men went ashore that evening, but the remainder of the passengers waited another day for an opportunity to set foot on Patagonian soil.

Sources

- R. Bryn Williams, Y Wladfa (Caerydd, 1962)
- E. MacDonald, Dyddiadur Mimosa (Llanrwst, 2002)

Task 1. First emigrants' places of origin

Place small flags on a map of Wales to show the first emigrants' places of origin. Do you see a pattern? Try to explain.

Complete the worksheet - The First Emigrants

Task 2. Reasons for emigrating

Choose two individuals from the photograph. Write captions to explain their reasons for emigrating.

Complete the worksheet - Emigration

Task 3. The voyage and it's difficulties

What difficulties would the travellers have faced during their voyage to Patagonia?

Task 4. Write a script - The Migration

Use the fruit of your research to write a script entitled 'The Migration'.

Complete the worksheet - Script - The Migration

Task 5. Landing on the beaches

Imagine being on the first voyage to Patagonia and landing on the beaches of New Bay on the 28th July 1865. What would be your first priorities when you arrived?

Complete the worksheet - 'The Old Fort', 28 July 1890

Task 6. Skills to establish a settlement

What skills would the emigrants need in order to establish a settlement in Patagonia?

Complete the worksheet - 28 July 1865

Task 7. Richard Ellis's Journal

Read the selected entries from Richard Ellis's Journal 1865 - 1867.

Read - Richard Ellis's Journal (part 1)

Task 8. The first months in Patagonia

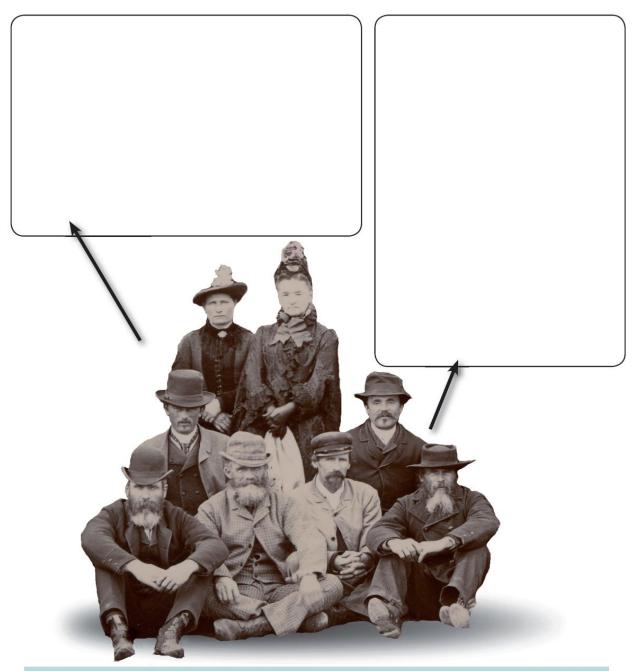

Suggest how they might have clothed and fed themselves during their first months in Patagonia.

Read - Richard Ellis's Journal (part 2)

The First Emigrants

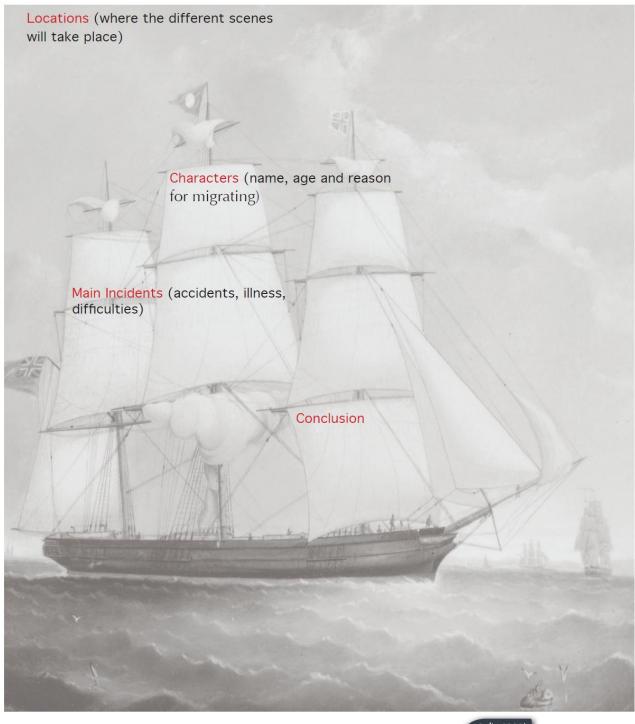

Emigration

Choose two individuals from the picture. Write captions to explain their reasons for emigrating.

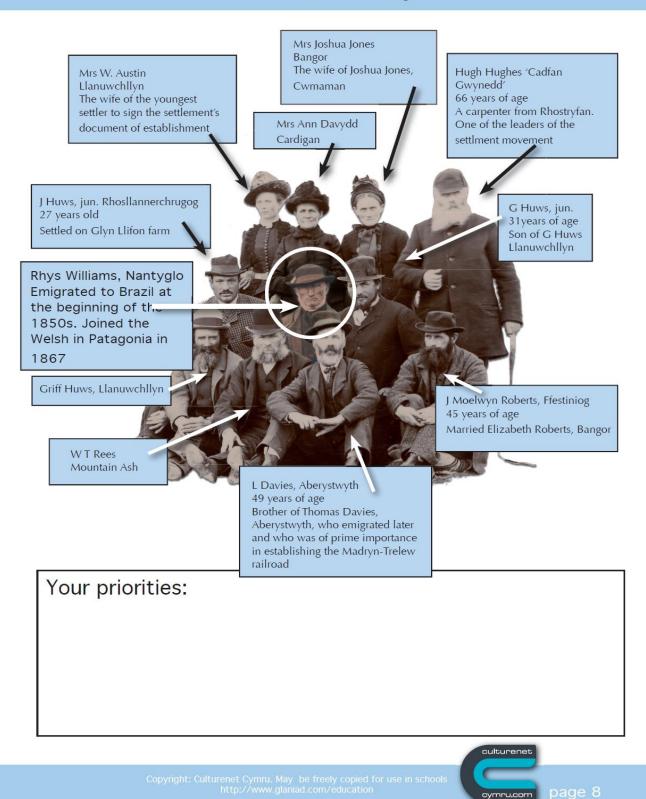

Script - The Migration

Copyright: Culturenet Cymru. May be freely copied for use in schools http://www.glaniad.com/education

page 7

Some members of the first group of emigrants near 'The Old Fort', 28 July 1890

28 July 1865

What skills would a group need to establish a settlement in Patagonia?

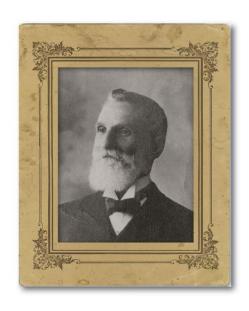

Skills	For what?

culturenet

page 10

Richard Ellis's Journal

Richard Ellis kept this journal for 51 years, from 1865 to 1916. Though the diary contains very few details, Ellis's entries offer a glimpse of the daily life of the Welsh settlers. Some important events in the history of the Settlement are mentioned, such as the landing of the 'Mimosa' on 28 July 1865, the first visit by the indigenous people in April 1866, and the constant struggle to raise crops.

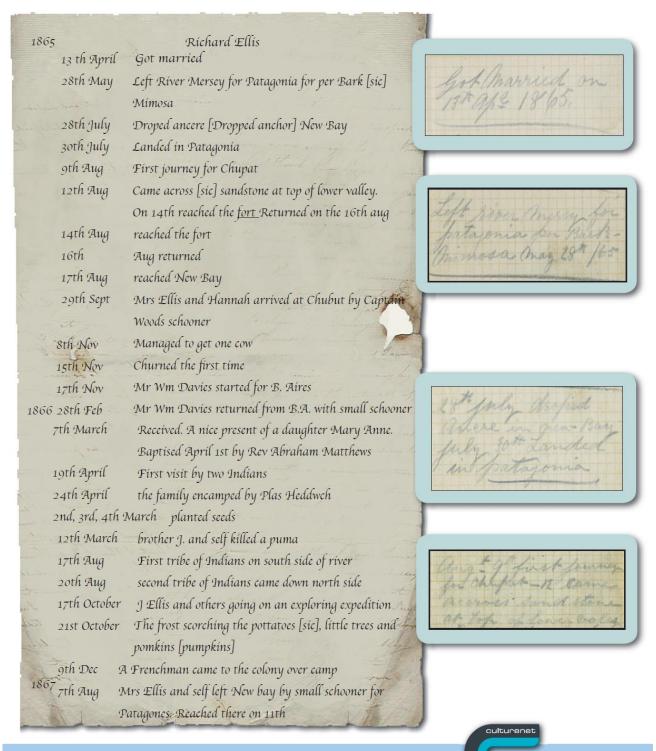

Copyright: Culturenet Cymru. May be freely copied for use in schools

Richard Ellis's Journal

Copyright: Culturenet Cymru. May be freely copied for use in schools http://www.glaniad.com/education