People's Collection Wales website provides a platform for a diverse range of content to be contributed and shared by national and local institutions, in addition to individuals and community groups.

People's Collection Wales is a free to use website which offers innovative ways to utilise content and share it with new audiences.

What can People's Collection Wales offer my organisation?

- A free platform on which to share your content with new audiences
- Opportunity to promote your service and present your collections in an innovative way
- The tools and skills necessary to digitise your collection, preserving it for future generations
- Benefit from being part of a wider initiative including increased public profile, shared resources and exploration of new technologies
- Opportunity to undertake further training

Digital Heritage Stations

Digital Heritage Stations are set up in organisations, for example museums and libraries, and provide the public with free access to IT and digitisation equipment. These stations facilitate the exploration, and crucially, the digitisation of historical items, preserving them for future generations.

If you are interested in hosting a Digital Heritage Station at your organisation, or would like more information, please contact casgliadywerin@llgc.org.uk or (01970) 632 500.

Interested in Becoming a People's Collection Wales Champion?

A Champion's role is to assist others in sharing content, in addition to promoting heritage activity. Champions need to be either staff or volunteers at Digital Heritage Stations and their role is to assist others in sharing content, in addition to promoting heritage activity. Champions can also choose to undertake an Agored Cymru Qualification Framework course in Digitisation for Museums, Libraries, and Archives.

For more information on People's Collection Wales Champions and Digital Heritage Stations please see the website www.peoplescollection.wales
